Retreat Overview

In a world of grief, pain, and brokenness, it can be tempting to give up, to lose hope. But Jesus shows us that He has already begun His work to mend the hurting, restore the lost, and make all things new. He calls us to witness to the freedom we have in Him and to His promises of perfection by working beauty in a broken world. Join together with fellow women to rediscover what it means to live like Christ and to point to a hope beyond anything the world could imagine. Bring friends and family with you for this retreat that rests in the promises of Revelation 21:1-6.

Lisa M. Clark is an editor for Concordia Publishing House, and she loves the opportunity to work on a variety of resources that share the saving message of Jesus Christ.

Lisa writes devotions, children's books, curriculum, fiction, and more. She has written hundreds of hymns, many of which can be found in a variety of CPH resources.

Her degrees and studies focus on Lutheran doctrine, education, and writing. She is currently engaged in doctoral research that focuses on the themes of hymnody, eschatology, and the Church's witness to the world. She lives in the south city area of St. Louis with her husband, a pastor, and their two teenaged kids.
